WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Moderate to strong Santa Ana winds are expected through this evening. Gusts up to 60 mph will occur at times over Southern California Mountains and 40 to 50 mph in the valleys.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

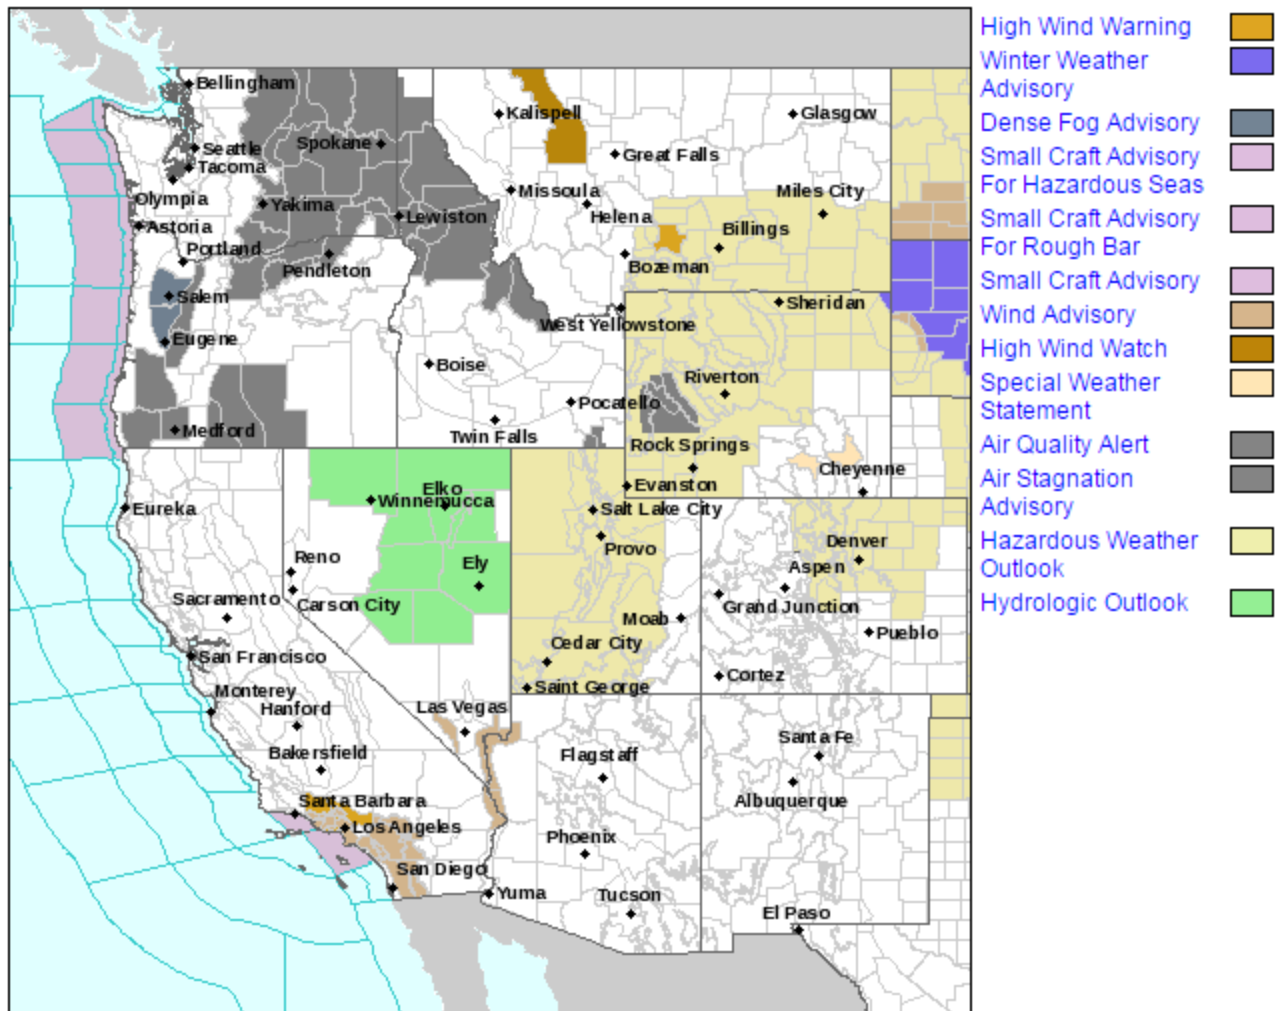

Dry next several days with patchy morning valley fog. Wet pattern returns with light precipitation Wednesday with heavier rain and mountain snow Thursday and Friday. Water vapor and model analysis continued to show an upper level ridge of high pressure over northern California overnight. With calm winds and mostly clear skies, patchy areas of fog were developing in the Valley early Saturday morning. Satellite imagery was indicating an influx of some high level clouds, which may keep temperatures a bit warmer in the early morning hours than the past few mornings. Warmer temperatures may lead to patchy fog rather than frost development, but areas under clear skies may see more frost as temperatures dip close to the freezing mark.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

High pressure and gusty offshore winds will bring mostly clear skies and increasingly warm temperatures to southwestern California into early next week. A weak storm system should bring some rain and cooler temperatures to the area during the second half of next week. Overall, 00Z models in good synoptic agreement through the period. At upper levels, ridge will build over the area today and remain in place through Monday. Near the surface, high pressure will remain over the Great Basin, continuing the offshore flow. Forecast-wise, main issue will continue to be gusty Santa Ana winds. For today, surface gradients are more offshore than Friday, but upper support is weaker. End result for today will be a continuation of moderate to locally strong Santa Ana winds, with warning-level gusts in the Ventura/LA mountains and strong advisory-level gusts across the coasts and valleys. For tonight and Sunday, surface gradients relax slightly and upper-level support continues to weaken. So, will expect weaker Santa Ana winds, but still possibly strong enough to warrant low end wind advisories in some areas of Ventura/LA counties. By Sunday night and Monday, the offshore flow will continue, but with winds below advisory levels. For San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties, the offshore winds will be weaker. However, there may be some locally gusty conditions below the more favored passes and canyons.
